WILT THOU PASS OR FLUNKETH

And it came to pass early in the morning of the day of the exam there arose a multitude smiting their books and ailing. And there was much weeping and gnashing of teeth, for the day of judgment was at hand and they were sore afraid. For they had left undone those things which they ought to have done, and they had done those things which they ought not to have done, and there was no help for them.

And there were many abiding in their rooms who had kept watch over their books all night, but it naught availeth. But some there were who arose peacefully for they had prepared for themselves the way, and made straight the path of knowledge. And these wise ones were known to some as the burners of the midnight oil, but by others they were called curve-spoilers.

And the multitudes arose and ate a hearty breakfast; and they came into the appointed place, and their hearts were heavy within them. And they had come to pass, but some to pass out.

And some of them repented of their riotious living and bemoaned their fate, but they had not a prayer. And at the last hour there came among them one known as the instructor, he of the diabolical smile, and passed paper among them and went upon his way.

And many and varied were the answers which were given, for some of his teaching had fallen among the fallows, while still others had fallen flat. And some turned away sorrowful. And many of these offered up a "little baloney" in hopes of pacifying the instructor, for these were the ones who had not a prayer. And when they had finished, they gathered up their belongings and went away quietly, each in his own direction and each on vowing to himself in this manner: "I shall not pass this way again. It is a long road that has no turning."

THE HISTORY MACHINE

When I first entered the assembly plant, I was immediately directed to the such-and-such room where I first came in contact with a fully ordained priest of higher education. He proceeded to describe the intricate details that I would follow during the assembly procedures. He tried to console me with the fact that, though they were difficult at first, the assembly procedures would become a natural bodily habit and thus would cause me little trouble.

Finally the day of assembly arrived and before I knew it, I was engulfed by the den of confusion. The assembly workers, commonly referred to as professors, were all dressed in full battle array.

In my hand, I held a proclamation which declared that I was to be a history machine. As you know, a history machine is made up of quite a few parts as is any educational machine. With this in mind, I began an assault upon the history assembly line. Finally after four hours of bargaining, I was issued all the necessary unit parts. I rattled at the thought of only having two more days left before installation would begin. As I shuffled home, I had a slight feeling of happiness for I knew that I was well on my way to becoming an accepted member of the mechanical society.

Soon the eventful day arrived and I proceeded to my first introductory session. As I entered the room, I took my chosen station area and attempted to look as distinguished as possible. Being impatient, I asked the person sitting beside me if he had any idea where the professor was keeping himself. He replied that it was rumored that he would be late because of an overdue oil job. Soon our ears picked up the faint sounds of metal striking wood. The consensus of the mass was that he had been wound up too tight the previous day. As it entered the doorway, the entire congregation dropped to their knees and gave homage to the mighty mechanical mind. We then rose and began to sit attentively as the professor threw back his head and gargled in confusion. He then began to spit out bits of necessary information regarding the installation of the such-and-such subject. Soon it became time to enter the apathy machine which was an established facility in every room. This is a time when all previous means of thinking fall into abstraction. We were soon on our way to the conquest of boredom.

I'm writing this story for the benefit of you the reader. Not everyone has to fall into the classification of a machine. I made the mistake of declaring intellectural curiosity. My advice to all of you is to sit at home and practice being a dummy. Maybe if you're lucky enough some day you will have the occupation of running me.

For some, the University is a last defense, the last stop before facing reality . . . that absurd guise of the world. For others, it is a last place to look for something to respect and believe in. Here there are those who seek anonymity in a number . . . and those who seek themselves in the eyes and words of others. It is a place where the assured and confident can revel in their ambition . . . and where the confused can come to rest . . . to contemplate their confusion.

In a world ruled by practical men . . . where idealists are often outcasts . . . the University is a place where a dream can be the starting point . . . or the goal . . . a place where a dream can be.

The University is a sanctuary of contradictions . . . an island for the confused . . . a starting place for the determined. For the sum total of a University . . . its motive for existence . . . its life and being . . . are the confused, determined people who learn and teach there . . . the people who discover new ideas and define old ones . . . the people who uncover tomorrows with the unlikely device of youth . . . with the secure logic and knowledge of what has gone on before.

Without these people, the buildings would stand mute . . . unable to mutter one idea of their own. Without these people, the University would have nothing to give but silence . . . the echo of unasked questions. Without their curiosity, the University would stand in stillness . . . a symmetrical exercise in buildings and books.

The University exists because they exist. They are the University . . . they are what it stands for . . . it is what they make of it. The University grows only when they grow . . . when the ideas they find here are used to replenish and change the world about them.

With hours absorbed in persons and issues,
Days straining for 'relevance,'
Catching implications of cybernetics,
Apollo flights and Senator Fulbright,

While questioning Vietnam, poverty,
Inflation and ABM's,
Researching this full-uttered cow

Labeled 'Church,'

Quietly I thank God for the non-issued joys
Of Andre Previn in Grant Park,
The Boston Symphony at the Esplanad,
Herb Alpert on a GTO's tape deck.

Grateful there is Michigan avenue,
A Charles river, an Oklahoma sunrise,
Oregon trees, Colorado-wined air,
West Virginia hills and San Francisco,

The Grand Canyon suite,
Graceful launches of 707's,
The finese of actors and athletes:
    All
        Beautiful
            Things
                Made
                    With Love

In our issue-wrapped age.

From this Eastered man
I send you dark beer
and monk's bread,
beach dances and 707's,
warm embraces and blue
splashed music,
peace posters and cloister silence,
pink orchids and beautiful coeds, baskets of 'elan and wine washed air—

  tied in clear strains of Alleluia
  and wrapped in love.

Circling the cinders
Or missed hours on the pad
Telegraph the third decade
With aching muscles.

But the vitality of
Countless collegians
Beckons a life
Younger than age.

Though never absent
From suns which
Draw one to maturity,
The shell cracked slowly.

Spring came late
Budding
In the warmth of Irresistable loves.

Monday
Morning wears a veil
of cold, gray drizzle.
I have a vague feeling
That God needs an Alka-Seltzer

Farmington, W.Va., November 24
Seventy-eight men in a hole in the ground
And nobody knows if they'll ever come out.

The flys come buzzing,
Hoping to land,
Lusting to see,
Drawn by the stench of dead and dying flesh—
They covet the salt in the tears.

The old brick road is a leach on the hillside
Built by the Green
Black
Red
Blood of the land.
It slithers past the ball park—

A gift
For the loss of a father,
And on
To the company store.
Dead. But standing still,
With its great gray fangs
Buried in the throat of the hill.

One wet dog
Cuddles underneath a rain-soaked TV set,
Waiting for someone to come home
And play.

Seventy-eight men in a hole in the ground,
Wanting only water,
Or one last gasp of air,
But at the edge of town
The sign still reminds that Coke Refreshes You Best.

As the Tijuana Brass can set the mood for the manner in which we dance, so the present times set the mood for the manner in which we live.

To catch a feel for the mood of our age is not easy. To be tuned to the pitch and tone of our times is difficult.

The moment in which we are living has its mood; a mood created by burned cities, weeks in Appalachia, the vision of Kennedy, the strength of King, the tragedy of Vietnam.

For the man of faith, the resurrection of Christ is not separate from the mood and tone of this age. Like bread, beer, rain and music, the resurrection is woven into the fabric of life.

For the man of faith—alive and sensitive—death and resurrection are part of the ongoing, evolutionary process in which we live.

Our being in the world of 1969 is as natural and beautiful a thing as the launch of a new keel upon the waters or the maiden flight of a jet. Nothing in creation is too big for man, too hot to handle.

The world like a Mother has received the seed of Christ buried in her and now risen. And it is gradually works out its victory over the forms of death which poignantly touch each of us. As Norman O'Connor has written, "The syncopations of these death forms are the ones we have been hearing since we had ears to hear and eyes to see and the mood is best described by the lonely voice of Billy Holiday because the single voice with the rasp and the whiskey best describe the loneliness of living and the horror of life."

But the person who senses the resurrection will be the one who works to detect, uncover and celebrate the miracle of birth, glory and resurrection in whatever form or shape he finds it. And paradoxically, he accepts the fire and flack which he draws in celebrating life.

If Alleluia is the traditional manner of expressing awareness of resurrection, then in our day and age, alleluia will be expressed more in commitment to bridges than to walls; in a refusal to murder in a murdering society; with as much effort to understand St. Paul's idea of personhood, as there is to understand Hugh Hefner's idea of it; and in the final analysis, a willingness to get ulcers over people and not over things.

So from a growingly Eastered man, I hope our jangling discords of fear are turned into handshakes of peace. As Daniel Berrigan expressed it, "The worst thing in the world is to lose the texture of the world, to slip under, to become grave, to wear shrouds, to prefer false gods to real men. Don't slip, don't shock, don't be folded, stapled, mutilated. Everyone worth talking about draws fire, from Guatemala to Vietnam and in between. Everyone is under bombs, except the makers of bombs."

Celebrate life—it is the only warmth which hatches the risen life of the world, over which the Holy Spirit broods.

THE FOOL

The fool is he who grows adept
At making self appear inept.

The Coward
(In Heroic Couplets)

I think that I shall not attempt to be,
A friend to all, except my best friend "me."

I'm all for one and I'm the one I'm for.
This ain't my bag, and man, this ain't my war!

If danger nears and I decide to run,
As I leave I'll let you have my gun.

If cowards die a thousand deaths, I say . . .
I'll die my thousand later, not today.

THE PROTESTOR

If Dupont steps on campus,
I'll picket in the streets.
I'll don my fragrant grubbies
And store away my neats.
I'll jeer each representative,
I'll call each one a slob.
But if I pass chem. 17,
I'll ask them for a job.

T.G.I.F.

There once was a man without fear,
Who drank eighteen gallons of beer,
While quenching his thirst,
His huge stomach burst,
Filling the streets with good cheer.

PLAYTEX LIVES!

A girl with a figure fantastic,
Her upper proportions bombastic,
Said "Girls, don't despair.
I think it's just fair,
To tell you it's all done with plastic."

FOOD FORTHOUGHT

Partaking of lunch at the dorm,
My victuals all seem to conform,
Believe what you're told,
Why everything's cold,
Excepting the ice cream, it's warm.

PROTESTORS

Jeeringly, sneeringly,
So perseveringly,
Heckle policemen,
Scream vulgar words.

Walk your mile, acting vile,
Oftentimes infantile,
Ramparts of freedom or
Sheep massed in herds?

ON LIVING

Integrate, copulate,
Go forth and populate,
Up with the negro!
Down with the pill!

Judism, prudism,
Everyday nudism,
Skip church this week
So you'll have "time to kill."

NOT QUITE KOSHER

If Cannibals were
Jewish, they could not eat a
Man like Charles DeGaulle.

MONOPOLY

The object of the
Game is to buy, and sell, and Eventually win.

POSTULATE

Poetry is oft' in vain,
Driving brilliant men inane. . . .

A MODERN PRIEST'S VIEW OF SEX AND MORALITY

How does one live and grow as a person? How does one relate lovingly and creatively to other persons? This is what sexuality is all about; for a man to be at home with his basic masculinity and a woman with her basic femininity; for both to be able to recognize and even cherish the feminine in the man, the masculine in the woman.

Sexuality is at the very heart of person and relationship. It can deeply sensitize or grossly dehumanize. This is why living fully as a woman or man requires a great sense of direction and goals. In this sense do we speak of morality and sexuality in the same breath.

Inhibition and control are at best important instruments in living out an intelligently perceived self-concept and lovingly but honestly relating to another. Simple "no-no's" and taboos are never the ingredients of an intelligent moral sense.

A truly human and, I think, Christian approach to sex cannot be adequately expressed in a list of do's and don't's and neat categories of mortal and venial sins. One can be irresponsible only insofar as these deeds represent his real attitude.

RATIONALIZATION

In judging one's own responsibility for actions it is always easy to rationalize in one's favor. This is why a person who seeks to be authentic must be able to share his questions and ambivalence about himself with others who are similarly concerned about life, its goals and its demands. Everyone must have a family or a community in which he can share his fears, doubts, reservations, questions—a community of idealists seeking to make their ideals practical.

I think this community notion is at the heart of the Roman Catholic idea of confession, the sacrament of penance and reconciliation. In confession, we Catholics are confronted with many specific questions about sex. How are we to deal with these questions healthily and responsibly?

Premarital sex, for instance, is not wrong because it is dirty, because it results in loss of physical virginity or reputation. For two people who deeply relate to each other, are in love, or think they are in love, to want to express themselves sexually is a normal and healthy development. But for human beings sex is not simply an inevitable instinct. It is the deepest form of human communication that exists. It is a most delicate, sensitive conversation which can open up persons to joy and deeper personhood, or it can hurt or reduce a person to a thing.

In such a communication where partners to the dialogue are open and exposed and vulnerable, it is possible to speak the most important word that needs to be said to one's beloved. But it is also possible to say too much, to say more than one is ready to say, to indicate total commitment but not be ready to back it up with the reality of one's life laid on the line for that other person. It is possible to say and even to mean it at the time: "I love you," and then take it back.

MATURE SEXUALITY

I use the example of premarital sex to say that sexuality is not at its heart a matter of what's clean or dirty, modest or obscene, pure or impure, but of what is most deeply human and honest and loving.

Responsible attention to one's sexuality, then, means two things. Mature sexuality is to be as fully and comfortably a man or a woman and in one's sexual context strive to release the deepest and best facets of one's personality. Mature sexuality is also to cherish and take responsibility for the good of the other person—not simply what the other wants or needs at the moment or what will "turn on" that person. To relate maturely means to bring one's best resources to the relationship and to evoke what is best from the other person.

PERSONAL VALUES

In what may seem a very idealistic approach, the value one puts on human dignity and the way one cherishes a relationship is the most real, immediate and practical motivation for appropriate sexual expression and control. As a believer in God committed to an incarnational approach to human life, I see God's plan for man worked out in the situation of each one as a person in relationship to others.

Laws, principles and guidelines for human behavior must be worked out in this framework. Any mere taboos or "no-no's" are inadequate to a real sense of direction and are even destructive of any real humanity.

THE GOOD, THE BAD, THE UGLY:

WE LOOK BACK ON A LONG YEAR

It's been a year of contrast, a collegiate version of "The Good, The Bad, and the Ugly."
As WVU students prepare for spring finals, they often look back on the school year nearing its end.

The Good memories come to mind first. Last fall, they saw the emergence of a fine sophomore quarterback, leading a great football team.

Interest in campus politics increased. The formation of a third campus political party was met with mixed emotions.

It's difficult to tell who's happier about the new unrestricted hours policy to go into effect next fall. Some of the men students cheered louder than the women. Although not yet in effect, the Statement of Student Rights and Responsibilities is looked upon as a step forward.

Many students, black and white, were pleased with the establishment of a Kappa Alpha Psi colony on campus. It's the first Black fraternity in WVU history.

And then there are the bad memories, "U" students saw their basketball team lose more games than they won. The Little Mountaineers are determined to reverse this trend, however.

The failure of the Festival of Ideas to attract great interest was a negative point on last year's score.

The 'Lair Snack Bar was the scene of two ugly incidents which marred an otherwise progressive, generally happy year.

One of the incidents was a near riot between approximately 40 students and nonstudents.

The other was the shooting of a young women for reasons as yet unknown.

After looking back, the students must turn to thoughts of finals. With enough study, the student version of "The Good, The Bad, and The Ugly" may have a happy ending.

DORMITORY LIFE

Looking back to our college years at West Virginia University some of the most memorable moments are those spent in the dorm.

In 1969 dormatories were called residence halls by Miss Betty Boyd. She placed student counselors called Resident Assistants in charge of each dormitory floor to encourage the students living there to learn outside the classroom.

Perhaps, we could better remember dorm life in 1969, if we were to peek into the personal log of a Resident Assistant at that time.

December 18, 1968. Final week is really here. Tonight some of the girls stuffed Sally and Janet's room with crumpled newspapers that they had saved all semester. The look on Janet's face when she opened the door was worth the trouble. I had the girls put all the paper in the incinerator. At least, if it catches fire there, it is safe.

December 19, 1968. The whole dorm was filled with smoke this morning. The housekeeper nearly evacuated the building until she found out that the incinerator was clogged with newspaper on second floor. She came to ask me what was going on, because all the waste baskets in my section were filled with newspaper.

January 20, 1969. Diane and Peggy (math majors) stacked coke cans to fill Terrie's door. They had calculated the number of cans needed and stored them in their closet.

January 21, 1969. This morning the whole section was awakened by falling cans when Terry opened her door. The maid locked me out of my room again today.

January 30, 1969. I'm going to establish office hours when I take my bath, since that's the only time anyone comes to talk to me. I must remember to change news bulletin board tomorrow.

January 31, 1969. We had to take Jeanne to the emergency room at University Hospital tonight. She had her hand caught in a peanut jar. There was vaseline on the door knobs for me at room check tonight.

February 10, 1969. The maid must have a bizarre interest in tribal music. She beats the bottom of each wastebasket at 8:00 in the morning for ten minutes, when there is usually just one tissue in the bottom.

February 14, 1969. Practically everyone got flowers today.

February 18, 1969. There are four refrigerators and six television sets in my section. No wonder we blow so many fuses.

February 24, 1969. Sally came to me today and complained, "I know the maid isn't very big, but does she have to drag her scrub bucket?"

February 25, 1969. Mandy, one of the freshmen with a 3.5 average last semester, came to tell me that she is flunking out of school, because she has a B in chemistry. I must remember to change that bulletin board.

March 3, 1969. Monsoon season is with us again. It has been raining for five days. Sally came to complain about the blaring stereo belonging to "the local hippies across the hall." The loafers I got last month are still rubbing blisters on my feet.

March 8, 1969. Everyone complained tonight because it is Saturday and there was no hot water. I must remember to change the bulletin board Monday.

March 10, 1969. Mandy came in to tell me that she is in love with Sam. She stopped in to tell me she was in love last week too, but then it was with Doug, and the week before it was George.

March 15, 1969. The Judiciary Board made Nancy sit in the dorm office for an hour this evening as a punishment. She forgot to place her special permission card in the box to stay out until 2:00 Saturday night. Some punishment! It is like going to a circus sitting there watching the girls and their dates. I've got to change the bulletin board.

March 20, 1969. Dee propped open one of the doors with her handbag setting off the alarm system.

March 22, 1969. Susan, Mary, and Cindy sat under a sun lamp too long. They look like firetrucks and probably wish one would put out the burning.

March 26, 1969. The Midnight Marauders were on the prowl again tonight. They woke up the whole floor trying to get a fourth for bridge.

March 27, 1969. Not one of the Marauders made it to class today. They were too tired.

March 30, 1969. Mandy is in love with Jim this week. Sally came to complain that the maid came in while she was in the closet, closed the door, and locked her inside. Hum! She didn't say how she got out. I've got to change that bulletin board.

April 1, 1969. When I took room check tonight there wasn't a sign of anyone in the section. After my hysteria passed, I went down to the desk to report that none of my girls were in. The housemother was very calm. When I came back to my room, thirty-six girls jumped out of every corner shouting "April Fool!"

April 4, 1969. The girls had a surprise party for my birthday. Everyone went off their diets to eat cake. Susan fainted in the middle of the party.

April 8, 1969. The sun deck opened today. It was wall to wall bodies until the incinerator polluted the air with soot.

April 11, 1969. Barbara had twenty guests in the section last night. They must have slept on hangers in the closet. The maid locked me out of my room again today.

April 13, 1969. Susan and Jeanne pulled an all-nighter last night. The pill Susan took wore off before her test, and she slept through it.

April 19, 1969. Nancy had to make a poster as a punishment from the Judiciary Board. I wish I would remember to do something to the bulletin board.

April 20, 1969. Half of the girls went to formals this weekend. Gee, my term paper is due this week.

April 30, 1969. The fire drill we had tonight caught me and twenty others in the bath tub. We looked great out in front of the dorm in our towels and trench coats.

May 3, 1969. We had a steak dinner with baked potatoes and sour cream. Sally complained that her steak mooed when she cut it.

May 4, 1969. The semester is just about over.

May 18, 1969. Guess I won't have to change that bulletin board now.

"UNI-SEX"

While "Uni-sex" was the look promoted by the New York fashion world, at West Virginia University coeds blossomed forth in the "Uni-form" look. At least the old cliche "safety in numbers" seemed the prevailing clothes philosophy.

Counting the number of coeds wearing shirts with the Edwardian collar (wide and pointed) with or without a tie or scarf of some kind would have been an interesting pastime. Five of the Ten Best Dressed Coeds, as pictured in the Mountainlair showcase, sported a variation of this long pointed collar and a tie.

Even though the word from Paris and Italy was hem lines at ten inches above the knee, at the knee, below the knee, mid-calf, or at the ankle, many WVU women chose only ten inches above the knee. Plump legs, skinny legs, medium sized legs with chubby knees, knobby knees and degrees in-between were featured by the status-conscious student. Unfortunately, a great number of those coeds perpetuating the mini-mini skirt didn't have the legs for it.

While on the subject of legs, let us not fail to mention the regulation cover-up for briar patch legs in 1969—the knee sock. In all colors, shapes, and forms the knee sock was the black sheep of its family. Not only were they old news fashionwise, but they were unbecoming to most legs.

The WVU woman's "uniform" called for fashions with particular labels neatly stitched at the neck from just the right store. Most coeds didn't seem to mind paying as much as $90 for a suit or skirt outfit, only to wear it for the first time in the presence of four other girls in the same ensemble. Meeting oneself at every street corner must have given a feeling of security.

Having an "in" pair of shoes was a source of pride, if they were of the chunkie heel variety or the popular brand name loafer. If the feet could survive the initial three month period it took to break them in, the coed could wear one pair all four years. One coed suggested that they be issued to all freshmen in campus packs.

Another requirement for the WVU "in" look was long straight hair. It could have been worn tied back with a scarf, ribbon, or clip, or allowed to hang. If it wasn't grown long, it was grown frosted. With $4 for a package of a wonderful new bleaching process, the coed's hair could look just as bold and brassy in streaks or racing stripes as the girl's next door.

When the country's fashion leaders declared open season on the "you" look in 1969, there was great hope for the WVU coed. Finally she had the opportunity to escape the mix and match everyday wear of the skirt, sweater, and oxford cloth blouse and a chance to step up into a new era of fashion "designed with you in mind." The day had come when a woman could choose the hem length that best suited the size of her legs, a neckline that flattered her face, a waistline in the most becoming place, and a chance to express her taste in accessories with no great risk of being out of style. But, alas, it was not the "you" look that evolved at West Virginia University that year, but just another "Youniform" look.

"I'LL MAKE YOU PROUD"

"My boy don't wanna go to no college! No sir, he's a'goin' to that trade school an' larn how to be a good mechanic! Yup, thet's what this world needs more of! We don't need no astrenots or fast-talkin' eggheads!" Walter Alvin McCoy beamed as he pounded his son on the back and bellowed, "Yea sir, this boy here ain't no fool; he ain't gonna go to them colleges and grow no beard; he ain't gonna burn no draft cards. Ere ye, Oakie? No Sam, he ain't gonna be no long-haired wierdo!"

Sam, the grocer, nodded and said, "Thet's fine, Oakie. You're a fine boy . . . always said them McCoys was fine boys."

Oakie just smiled. He was a thin, weak-looking boy and not very tall. He had big feet. His feet and his cabbage-leaf ears were the most outstanding things about him. Oakie's hair was reddish-brown and it seemed as though he had had that cowlick from the day he was born. He wore a pair of brown-rimmed glasses that seemed too large for his thin face.

"Gotta head on home now, Sam. Me and Oakie gonna be late for supper," said Walter Alvin as he picked up the bag of groceries in his huge arms. He rested the bag on his pot belly and opened a pouch of tobacco with his other hand, pinched a wad and shoved it into his fat, sunburned cheek. Oakie opened the door for his father and put on his new, tan cowboy hat. It sat on his head like a thimble; the brim came to a point in the front and the hat made his ears look like wings.

"See ya fellas!" yelled Sam.

"Bye", whispered Oakie. Oakie and his father, Walter Alvin got into their old, blue pick-up truck. On the way home, Walter laughed and joked with his son.

"Yea, Oakie, we'll show 'um. We'll show this town just how smart us McCoys is. Yea, 'specially that Uncle Paul o' yers. Thet brother o' mine thinks his kid's so hot! Why he ain't nothin' next to you, Oakie. No, Frankie never was a smart kid. You know he sucked his thumb 'til he was five. You quit when you was three, Oakie. You was always way ahead o' him. Yup, I'm real proud of ya son, real proud!" Walter leaned towards the door to spit out the window.

"Thanks, Paw." muttered Oakie.

"Now Paul keeps braggin' on thet kid o' his, how he's goin' to college this fall and all. Well you know what I think o' thet, Oakie . . . you know what I think, huh? You know, huh? Well, I think he's just wastin' a lot o' hard-earned money. College ain't gonna larn ya nothin' important. Now a trade, if ya larn a good trade, thet's somethin' important!" Walter said forcefully as he pulled up to their red-shingled farm house.

"Sure, Paw . . . thet's somethin' important." echoed Oakie.

Saturday night Walter Alvin's brother Paul, Paul's son Frankie, and three neighbors—George, Oscar, and James Elmer came to Walter Alvin's house to play a game of poker. At least this was their pretense; they usually just came to drink home brew and tell stories. Oakie and his father and George sat on one side of the table; Paul and Frankie sat opposite them, and Oscar and James Elmer sat at the ends of the big wooden table in the kitchen.

"Well Paul, I'm gonna trim ya up good tonight!" boasted Walter Alvin as he took a big swallow from his mug and wiped his mouth with his sleeve. Then he began, "Say, when's yer boy startin' to college?"

"He starts first o' September! Yea, Martha and me's real proud o' Frankie." Paul beamed and nudged his son. "Tell 'em what yer gonna take up, Son." Paul coaxed.

"Oh, I'm goin' into agriculture. I'm gonna try to learn scientific ways o' farmin', learn how to raise better crops, and better cattle; I'm hopin' to be a first rate farmer . . . a scientific farmer." Frankie then sat back in his chair with a look of self-confidence.

"I'd send Oakie, ifin' he wanted to go." said Walter Alvin. "But he don't need college . . . he wants to larn to be a good mechanic. Ain't thet right, Oakie?"

"Sure, Paw." chirped Oakie.

Then Walter Alvin began, "Yea, now thet scientific farmin' might be a good thing, but ya know I can't trust them scientific people much. You know they're shootin' them rockets at the moon. Thet's just lookin' fer trouble. You 'member what happened to them people in the Bible—tryin' to build thet tower to the sky, tryin' to reach God. You know God ain't gonna let 'em land on the moon!"

The men all nodded in agreement. The poker game lasted until one-thirty a.m. and then the men got their jackets and stood around the door saying goodbye to the McCoys.

"See ya in Church!" shouted Paul and he slammed the door of his car. Walter Alvin and Oakie waved from the porch. As the men drove off, Walter Alvin and Oakie went back into the house.

"Oakie, pull up a chair." Walter said to his son as he bolted the kitchen door. Oakie was tired but he sat down, put his elbows on the table, and propped his head up with his hands.

"Oakie, what do ya think of Frankie goin' to college? I mean, what do ya really think?" asked Walter.

"It's O.K. I guess." said Oakie in the middle of a yawn.

"Well Oakie, I've been thinkin' . . ." Walter spoke pensively and wrinkled his forehead. Oakie tried desperately to keep his eyes open and strained to listen to his father.

"Oakie, if ya really want to go to college like yer cousin, I don't wanna hold you back. I don't want ya to think thet I don't want you to have a edjucation."

"But, but . . ." stammered Oakie.

"Now, Son, you know I only want what's best fer ya. Us McCoys wants what's best fer our boys. So I've decided to let you go to college!" Walter sat back and grinned from ear to ear. "We'll talk about it in the mornin'. Let's hit the hay!" Walter Alvin slapped his boy on the back and they walked upstairs together.

"Tomorrow, Son, we'll talk about yer future! Night." Walter turned into his room.

Oakie was too tired to reply. He was tired and not as concerned as his father about his future. He would have been happy just going to the trade school and becoming a mechanic; but, if his father wanted him to go to college, he was willing to give it a try.

After church the next morning, Walter Alvin announced to his brother, Paul, that Oakie had decided to go to college in the fall. He told Paul that they were making the arrangements that week and that they would see about getting Oakie accepted to the state college in Waverton.

The summer months flew by. Walter Alvin and Oakie had just returned from the fields. They had been out all day harvesting hay. Walter and Oakie sunk down into two chairs on the porch.

"Well, Oakie, tomorrow's the big day! Yer goin' off to college." Walter Alvin grinned and looked at his son.

"Yup, I'm gonna miss ya, Paw," said Oakie sorrowfully as he looked into his father's big gray eyes.

"Well, it's fer the best, Oakie. I want ya to have a good future." Walter slapped his thighs and got up to wash his hands for supper.

"I'll make you proud," Oakie said as he followed his father through the door.

In the morning Oakie nervously dressed for his trip to Waverton State College. He was full of anxiety. What would he find there?

"Hurry up, boy!" shouted Walter Alvin from the foot of the stairs. "Yer bus leaves at nine!"

Oakie clomped down the stairs. He carried a big plaid suitcase in his hand. His face was shiny; his hair looked as if it had been cut using a pair of scissors and a bowl. He still had that cowlick. He wore a red and green plaid shirt and a pair of baggy, navy blue trousers. He had on a pair of bright green socks and a brand-new pair of black penny-loafers with a shiny nickle tucked into each slit.

"I'm ready, Paw," he moaned, staring at the floor. He was afraid to look up because he didn't want his father to see the tears he felt welling up in his eyes.

"Well, you look fine, boy, real fine! We'd better go!" Walter shouted.

Walter picked up his son's suitcase and started for the truck. Oakie got into the truck after taking a long, sorrowful look at the house. They drove down to the bus station. It was 8:45. Soon the bus with the sign reading "WAVERTON" pulled into the station.

"Well, boy, I guess it's goodbye for now. Don't worry, I'll be over to see ya next week and see how yer doin'." Walter Alvin helped his son lift the suitcase out of the back of the truck. They walked toward the bus; Walter Alvin coughed (he always coughed when he was nervous). "Well, son, be good . . . You study hard now, hear?"

"I will, Paw," Oakie said as he shook hands with his father and tried to keep the tears back.

"You won't grow no long hair?" Walter Alvin asked.

"No, Paw," Oakie assured him.

"An' you ain't gonna burn no draft cards?" Walter put his arm around his son's shoulder.

"No, Paw." Oakie answered firmly. "You'll see, Paw; I'll make you proud."

Oakie mounted the steps of the bus and the door closed behind him. Walter Alvin stood watching his son waving from the window as the bus pulled away.

Walter sighed, "They boy o' mine, he's gonna have a good future. Yea sir!"

□ The beat of the West Virginia University Percussion Ensemble was heard this past summer when the 13 member group traveled to about 10 Latin American Countries. □ The student group in the WVU Creative Arts Center was selected for the cultural tour by the Office of Cultural Presentations, Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, U.S. Department of State. "We feel very honored since our ensemble is only the second percussion group in the U.S. to be selected by the State Department for a cultural tour abroad," observed Philip Faini, conductor of the WVU ensemble. This honor is "recognition of the people of West Virginia who have supported a university in which the arts, along with other disciplines, are allowed the freedom and resources to research and develop new programs," he said. □ Formed in 1956 with only three members, the WVU ensemble has since grown in number and in emphasis. Divided into two categories, a training group and a professional touring group, the ensemble reflects the change that is taking place in percussion—from accompaniment to featured soloists. Although percussion instruments are as old as man himself, music written especially for this medium is a development of the 20th century. □ The WVU ensemble has premiered 20 new works for percussion as well as being one of the few, if not the only, percussion ensemble in the nation to perform authentic African music as part of its repertoire.

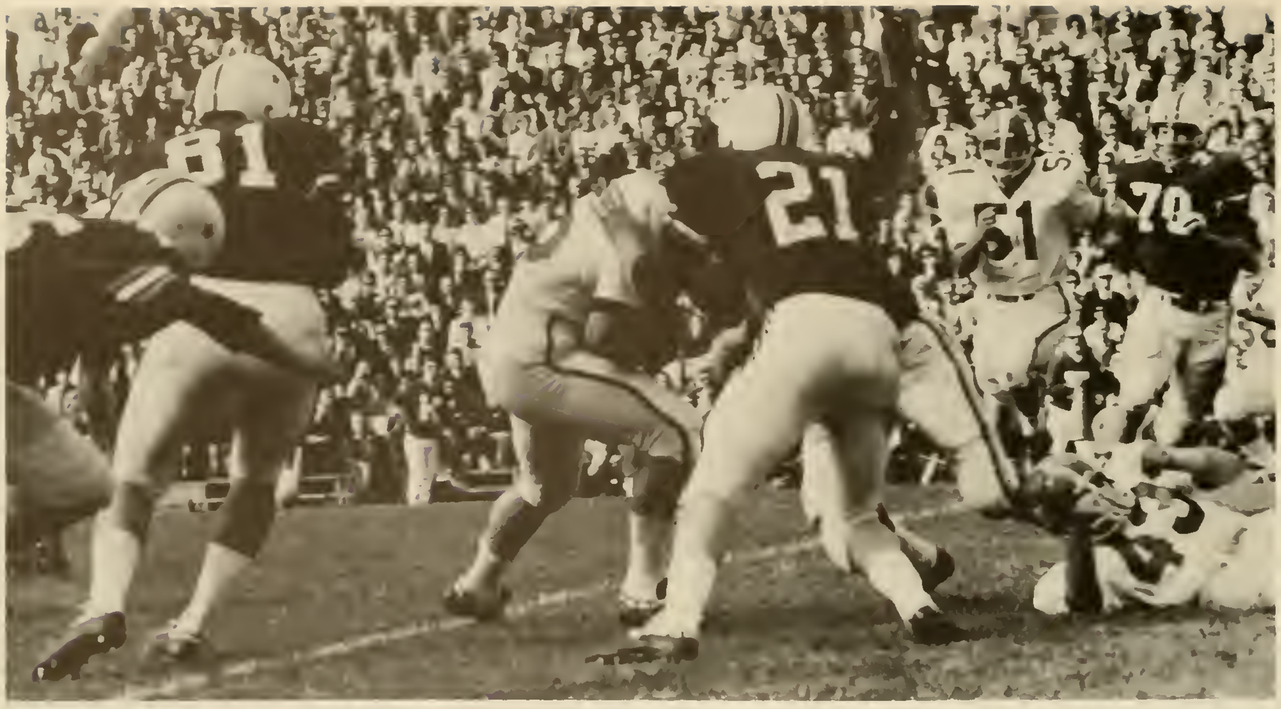
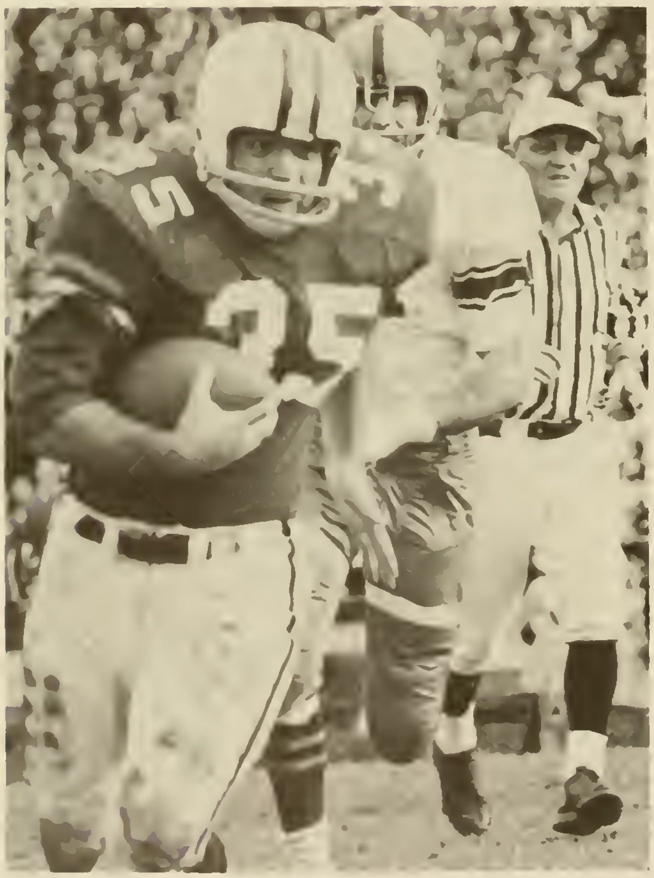
☐ It was a year that saw many changes in Mountaineer sports history. It was the year that the Mountaineers embarked on the new road of becoming a major independent college after the long-awaited withdrawal from the Southern Conference. It was the year that saw the Mountaineers enter the space age as they flew by chartered Boeing 727 jet to their away contests. It was a year that saw an entire rewriting of the WVU football record book. ☐ The season opened with a feeling of great things to come as the Mountaineers beat Richmond 17-0. It could have been a runaway if the young, inexperienced Mountaineers had not lost four fumbles and thrown two interceptions with frequent penalties spread in between. A 78 yard TD pass from Mike Sherwood to Oscar Patrick was not only the highlight of the game, but also an indication of things to come. The WVU defense, throwing Richmond's quarterback seven times for a total of −27 yards rushing and stifling his passing game, outshowed the offense. ☐ The records started falling on a beautiful fall day in Pittsburgh as WVU outclassed the Pitt panthers 38-15, WVU's biggest winning margin ever over a Pitt team. Sherwood hit 27 of 37 passes for a new record of 416 yards. The team total of 29 completions and 435 yards passing also set a new record. This time it was Sherwood to Gresham for a 73 yard TD pass that put the Mountaineer fans into a frenzy. ☐ Penn State, ranked number three in country, came into Morgantown the next week for the game of the year. The many festivities of Mountaineer Week were to come to an exciting climax as a spirited Mountaineer team brought a tough fight and a near upset to the Nittany Lions. Penn State took the opening kickoff and thirteen plays later scored the game's first touchdown. The drive was sustained by two key third down passes. WVU moved the ball 81 yards in eight plays in scoring the first time they had the ball. It was a Sherwood to Patrick TD. Then 2:38 later WVU scored again. It was a spectacular 67 yard pass that stunned the highly rated Lions. It was an intercepted pass in the second quarter that let Penn State catch up. The game was fought evenly until a fumble on our own twenty gave Penn State the ball with a 21-14 lead. The defense stopped the Lions cold and they had to settle for a field goal. An intercepted pass a few minutes later left WVU behind 31-14. Not ready to give up, the Mountaineers received the kickoff with only a few minutes left and marched 97 yards for the final touchdown to make the score of our first defeat 31-21.





☐ Then WVU began to falter. A slim 14-7 win over VMI in the Harvest Bowl started a disappointing three-weekend trip to Virginia. WVU looked better the next week as they gained a muddy 20-0 victory over William & Mary in the Tobacco Bowl. In this game Sherwood hit his 92nd completion, setting a new WVU season record. In Blacksburg the next week, bad times struck again. Even the Mountaineer was injured. The bright spots were few. Completing 20 of 43 passes for 243 yards on a cold, windy day, Sherwood totaled 1483 yards for the season, another school record. Oscar Patrick also raised his season totals to 37 receptions and 621 yards, both WVU season records. With WVU on the Virginia Tech 20, an interception led to a 74 yard TD for Tech. That is how the rest of the day was to go. WVU marched back 77 yards for a quick touchdown, but missed the extra point and trailed 7-6. Two Tech field goals made the half time score 13-6. WVU scored quickly in the second half, but another missed extra point left us behind 13-12. The Gobblers scored later in the game to lead 20-12. A fumble late in the game set up VPI's final TD and WVU had lost 27-12 to the Liberty Bowl bound Techmen. ☐ Returning to Morgantown the next week the Mountaineers lost the Homecoming tilt to the Kentucky Wildcats 35-16. An intercepted pass with a 100 yard runback gave Kentucky a 14-0 lead, which left WVU behind the rest of the game. In the contest, Sherwood set a new total offensive season record of 1630 yards. After a rainy 17-0 win over the Citadel in Charleston, S.C., the Mountaineers returned to Morgantown to complete the season.

☐ The Mountaineer booters built their highly successful season around a solid defense that allowed the opponents an average of only one goal per game and a balanced offense that averaged 4.8 goals per game. Leading the team to its fine 8-1-1 record was All-American Walt Nistorenko who collected fourteen goals and six assists during the year.

□ WVU SOCCER—KNEELING: Terry Parfitt, Tim Birx, Bob Boyd, Walt Nistorenko, Rick Mooney, Tom Dean, John DeGroff, John Denner, Paul Ernst. □ The highlight of the soccer campaign came with an invitation for the undefeated WVU booters to participate in the NCAA championship playoffs. Only three teams in the entire South received invitations. WVU lost the game 3-2 only after St. Louis, defending national champion, made a strong second-half comeback.

☐ During the 1968 season, Stan Romanoski's crew compiled a fine 11-3 record in dual meet competition. Their successful season was highlighted by several events. The team finished third in the NCAA Regional at Atlanta, Georgia, with Carl Hatfield capturing the top prize and setting a new course record in the event. The Mountaineers also made a strong showing in the NCAA national finals in New York City with Hatfield being named to the All-American team.

□ The West Virginia University wrestling team wrapped up George Nedeff's second winning season in his two years as WVU coach. Commenting on the season, Coach Nedeff said, "Everyone has worked very hard and many of our younger wrestlers had good years, so the season turned out to be a success."

□ Freshman Jack Cargnoni turned in the best record with 10-1-1. He was followed by Ken Vensel, 10-2, and Steve Orlasky, 9-3.

swimming

☐ The Mountaineer tankmen compiled an 8-4 record for the 1968-69 season, losing only to east Carolina, Maryland, Bethany, and Grove City, all perennial swimming powers.

☐ "We were well pleased with our performance this year. Rufus Hutchinson was a bright spot in the 200 yd. individual medley and the 200 yd. breaststroke, and of course Dave Holovics, a freshman, was undefeated in diving. Bill Kweder gave us a good effort in the middle distances, and John Law was almost unbeatable in the sprints. Mike Lukowski also, was a big help in the butterfly," summed up Coach Gilson.

□ Inclement weather kept the Mountaineers indoors until two days before heading south for their annual season opening spring trip. "This year's pitching was excellent, due partly to the fact that you can do more work with pitchers indoors during the bad weather season," commented Coach Ramsburg. Rain washed out eight of the twenty-seven scheduled games.

□ The Mountaineers were still able to pile up an impressive set of statistics through their nineteen game schedule. WVU outhit the opposition .266 to .161, outslugged them 204 total bases to 113, outscored them 89 to 52, and outpitched them 2.27 ERA to 4.61. Individually, four Mountaineers cracked the .300 hitting circle, including outfielder Larry Wilfong, .360, first baseman Dave Phillips, .362, second baseman Tom Tomechko, .309, and shortstop Buck Guth, .300. Among the pitchers, Jim Mavrolean and Fred Smith turned in impressive ERA's 1.19 and 1.82 respectively.

gymnastics

☐ Coach Bill Bonsall considers his 1968-1969 West Virginia University gymnastics team a success. This years edition finished with a Record of 8-4, but an additional two points in the right places would have raised the Mountaineer mark to 10-2, highly successful. Two of the four losses came to be a total of exactly 1.85 points. The same sort of competitive closeness followed the Mountaineer gymnasts into tournament action. Bonsall's crew finished fifth in the Southern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League (SIGL) championships, but two points separated WVU from second place.

track

☐ The strong point of the thinclads was the distance events. Coach Romanoski attributes much of the distance success to the cross country team and facility. "West Virginia has about the finest cross country course that I've seen," he says, "and of course the cross country runners bolster the track team. The runners were led by Carl Hatfield, WVU mile, two-mile, and three-mile record holder. Mike Mosser, freshman miler who created a sensation when he beat Hatfield in the mile during the indoor season, went on to accomplish that task several more times in the spring, giving Romanoski a more than pleasing one-two punch for that event. Added strength came from Dan Payne and Lott Steffey, WVU record holder in the 880.

The Mountaineers finished first in the United States Coast Guard Invitational with a score of 1104 and third in the National Intercollegiate League with a 1395 mark. Over the last eighteen years, the team has compiled a record of 216 wins and 49 defeats and has ranked among the nation's top teams.

☐ West Virginia tennis coach Rafael del Valle, in only his second season at the helm, led the Mountaineers to their first undefeated tennis season since 1941. The 1969 netters are the winningest team in Mountaineer history, completing a perfect 7-0 season. Three men, Pat Callahan, Bob Nilson, and Jay Dailer, swept through the season undefeated in singles competition. In addition, the number one and two doubles teams, Marc Parsons and Fred Smith, and Don Kingery and Braun Hamstead, respectively, were also undefeated.

☐ Coach Charley Hockenberry's 1969 Golf team recorded a very successful 14-3 record. The team was led by Fred Tattersal with a 77.1 average. He was followed closely by regulars Rick Lynn with 78.2, William Young with 78.4, and Jack Lynn with 78.5. Home matches were played at Morgantown Country Club and Lakeview Country Club, one of the nation's finest courses.

☐ WVU finished 13-14, posting its first losing season in five years. Junior guard Bob Hummell sparked a balanced attack with a 15.5 scoring average. Junior college transfer Larry Woods, 14.0, sophomore sparkplug Skip Kintz, 12.0, Greg Ludwig, 11.2, and Carey Bailey, 11.0, round out the double-digit scoring efforts.

☐ Although the Mountaineers finished with a balanced attack, their overall offense was inconsistent. Wayne Grimm led the team by shooting 54.7 percent from the floor and 80.7 percent from the free throw stripe. The rest of the team shot a weak 41 percent from the floor and 69 percent from the charity line.

Originality and effectiveness are qualities especially valuable in a yearbook. This year the Greek section pictures were judged on their originality and effectiveness by the Fairmont State College yearbook staff. Phi Delta Theta fraternity, pictured here, captured the honors.

TO OUR PARENT PATRONS

The cost of any major publication is great; without the help of our parent patrons the MONTICOLA would not have been a success. Your farsightedness in buying a yearbook will give your son or daughter many hours of pleasure as he pages through his MONTICOLA.

The West Virginia University MONTICOLA is the only permanent pictorial record that is available to the students. In it we have tried to compile a complete anthology of the year's happenings. To make the MONTICOLA more representative, we have added to and changed our book to keep up with the times. The 1969 MONTICOLA features a section of contemporary writings to help store the ideas from the years 1968 and 1969, the senior class is honored and featured with their respective schools and colleges, and lastly our unique yellow pages has replaced the conventional advertising section.

With greater enrollment each year at W. V. U., the MONTICOLA can be expected to parallel this growth. This is only possible when the parents and students maintain their support for our publication.

Therefore, we sincerely thank you!

BBF was designed to be an asset to the community.

We are proud to be a part of the community, to support its civic projects, its church and school programs, to help in its growth and development. We are always happy to participate in any activity which will make the community a better place to live and work.

We are in business to serve and service to the community is just as important to us, as service to our customers.

To serve You and the Community is our privilege.

Job hunting

Hope Gas has a comprehensive area development program aimed at bringing new industries to West Virginia. This involves a lot of things — market surveys, studies of labor availability, utility services, and transportation, to name a few.

As part of this program, Hope uses a helicopter to show potential plant sites to industrial prospects. All the physical aspects of a site can be quickly evaluated from the air.

New industries mean new jobs and greater security for the young men and women of West Virginia. So when you see a Hope helicopter hovering overhead, it may be job hunting — for you.

TONS OF TIN CANS

Perhaps you haven't thought much about it, but there's probably some of our steel in your home. If you have canned soft drinks or corn, beer or bug-bombs, peaches or pet food, it's a good bet that some of the cans are made of Weirton Steel's tinplate. Tons of tin cans bring to American homes an endless variety of foods, beverages, and anything else that can be canned. People enjoy the convenience of the mighty tin can, and our job at Weirton Steel is to make sure that you can continue to enjoy it.

Why make the nation's business yours?

Because you seek a career with challenge. Purpose. You want to help. And you want to get involved.

You'll find opportunity and fulfillment in private business, built on the capitalistic system that has given us the world's highest living standards.

American business continually searches for new and improved products, for better ways to do things, and keep costs down. Wherever there are problems to solve — in our cities, in space, under the sea — private enterprise responds with the talent and resources to bring about efficient, workable solutions.

Your work and achievement in the corporate community can be satisfying and rewarding, your contribution important. Check into opportunities in business enterprise.
